

1899 TO 1917

PRINCIPAL OFFICES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

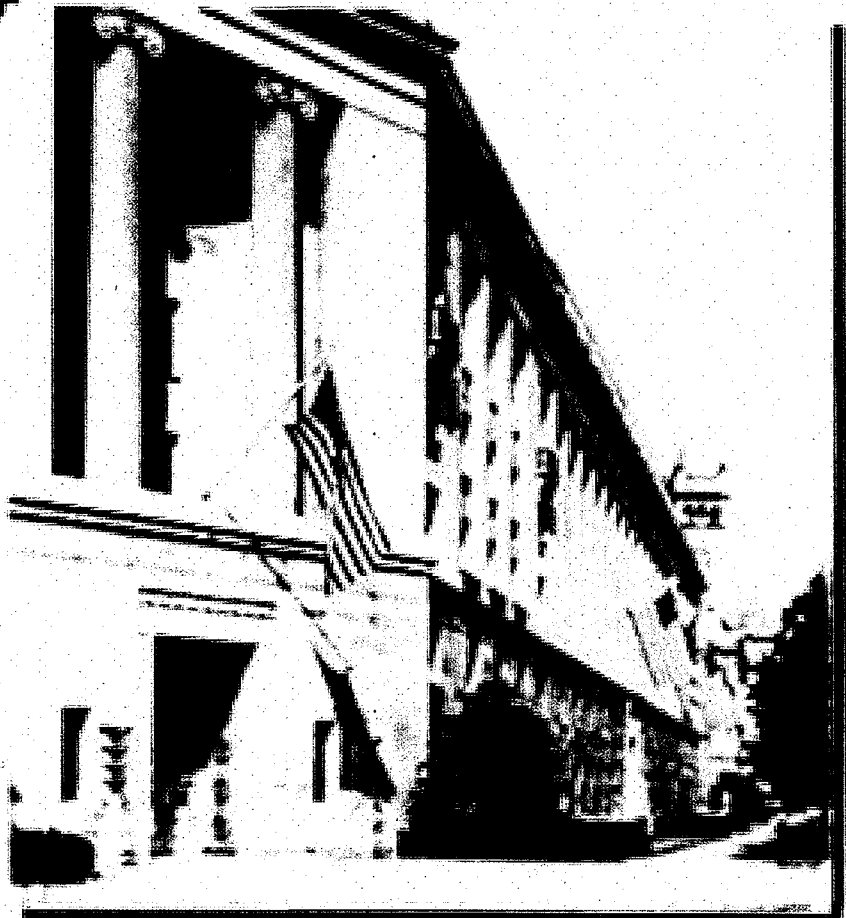

PRIOR TO 1899

1899 TO 1917

1917 TO 1934

NEW DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE BUILDING

The Department of Justice is the principal law enforcement agency of the United States. It is responsible for the administration of the federal courts and the prosecution of federal crimes. The Department is headed by the Attorney General, who is appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The Department of Justice is composed of several offices, including the Office of the Inspector General, the Office of the General Counsel, the Office of the Assistant Attorney General, and the Office of the Solicitor General. The Department also has a number of bureaus, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and the Federal Bureau of Census.

The Department of Justice is responsible for the administration of the federal courts and the prosecution of federal crimes. It is also responsible for the administration of the federal prison system and the federal census. The Department is a key part of the executive branch of the federal government.

The Department of Justice is a large and complex organization. It has a long history and a rich tradition. It is a key part of the federal government and plays a vital role in the administration of justice in the United States.